

July 4 Stories:

The three essays here describe the activities that the children participated in on July Fourth. Most accounts agree on several occurrences, including the following: The children ran a race, there was a ball game, there was ice cream and soda, there were firecrackers, they ate peanuts, they had a free dinner, they ate meat and bread, they drank beer, and they picked easter lilies on the hill.

The first essay is my favorite for its description of the ice cream flavors: white and brown.

Last Fourth of July we saw
the people dance

They gave us some icecream and a glass of soda we had two kind of ice-cream white and brown.

The Fourth of July be for the last
my uncle wind the price of dancing
out in the rain.

I went down there in the morning
and came last about 5 o'clock.

I have so much to say that I can not finish my story this time.
